What: A media briefing will be held this afternoon to further update the community on the status of the Woolsey and Hill Fires.

The briefing will include an operational overview of both fires as well as the most up to date evacuation orders.

Moderate to strong Santa Ana winds are driving the fire activity today. The winds are predicted to weaken this evening but then increase again by Monday morning. Relative humidity is dropping into the single digits with little or no recovery expected overnight. Given the wind and moisture conditions, as well as the dry vegetation, critical fire weather conditions will continue through the operational period.

Please arrive early, as the briefing will start promptly at 4:30 p.m.
